The Grande Rue is one of the main streets of the ancient sea-port of St. Malo, once a corsair stronghold, but now a fashionable sea-side resort. It winds up the side of a steep hill, whereon is the parish church of St. Vincent, and in it are found most of the principal shops. St. Malo is beautifully situated on an island in the centre of the bay of the same name and is the principal port of debarkation for visitors to Brittany.
